THE SPHERE'S special artist at Manchester here shows a characteristic Manchester highway, with its busy goods waggons and tramway cars clanging their way in all directions. Inset in the upper corners are statues of Cromwell and Queen Victoria. In the lower corners are the Duke of Wellington and Humphrey Chetham, the founder of the famous school for boys. The last statue stands at the east end of the cathedral. The base is covered with flowers, in recollection of the benefits which this pious citizen conferred upon Manchester
